TAKING OVER AN AMAZON ACCOUNT

What I check first, before I touch a single bid.

New owners usually start with bids and keywords.

I start with the leaks that cost money every day. Four of them, from one real account I took over this September.

CHECK 1 · IS YOUR BEST CAMPAIGN ACTUALLY SPENDING?

The best generic campaign was blocked by a portfolio cap.

WHAT I FOUND

The status said "Portfolio not delivering". The campaign that should have carried the account wasn't running.

WHY IT'S FIRST

There is no error message. The account just looks "slow", so it is easy to blame bids or keywords instead.

CHECK 2 · ARE YOUR WINNERS OUT OF BUDGET?

2 video campaigns converting at 29–37% were out of budget.

29–37%

conversion rate

on the video campaigns

Out

of budget

so they stopped showing

A strong campaign out of budget means sales you could have had at a good cost. The fix needs no new money: move budget to what already converts.

CHECK 3 · MONEY THAT WILL NEVER CONVERT

About $900 a month on searches that would never buy.

Wrong-language searches

Searches in a language the listing isn't written in

Wrong-intent searches

Looking for something the product isn't

Raw-ingredient searches

People shopping for the ingredient, not the brand's product

CHECK 4 · DOES THE STOCK PLAN USE THE REAL LEAD TIME?

The sheet said 45 days. Reality was about 15.

IN THE INVENTORY SHEET	IN REALITY
45-day lead time	About 15 days
Reorder alerts based on 45 days	So every reorder alert was wrong

If the reorder maths is wrong, every ad decision built on "how much stock do we have" is wrong too.

WHY THESE FOUR COME FIRST

None of them needs more budget.

- ✓ They cost money every single day
  A leak doesn't wait for your next optimisation cycle
- ✓ They hide inside "normal" reports
  No warning, no error, just a slow account
- ✓ Fixing them changes what every other number means
  Then bids and keywords are worth looking at
